Hains Mr. Trunnell, Mate of the Ship "Pirate"	Mr. Trunnell, Mate of the Ship "Pirate"          By Thornton Jenkins Hains (1866-1953) This is the tale of a perilous voyage aboard a clipper ship told by the second mate. He looks up to Trunnell, the first mate, who somehow manages to hold things together between a murdering former captain, a captain who may not actually be a captain, and a crew inclined to mutiny. This all leads to a surprising and satisfying ending. The author, Hains, wrote frequently of the sea. He is the author who (under a pen name) had a story on the newsstands about a liner hitting an iceberg and sinking, while Titanic was doing precisely that! Total running time: 06:36:42; read by Mark F.
